

*Authors - Notizie sugli autori **

Roberto Albano is Full Professor of Sociology at the Department of Cultures, Politics and Society – Università di Torino, Italy. His recent studies focus on digitalization and managerial control in organized work, as well as the repercussions of this relationship on workers' autonomy and wellbeing. His recent work has been published in Cambio, Rivista sulle trasformazioni sociali, Impresa Progetto, Electronic Journal of Management, and Studi organizzativi.

E-mail: roberto.albano@unito.it

Emiliana Armano is a Sociologist, PhD at University of Milan. As Independent researcher she collaborates in study into digital capitalism, with a social inquiry and co-research approach. Her research focuses on the intertwining of work processes and production of subjectivity. She has recently published (with Marco Briziarelli and Elisabetta Risi) the edited book Digital Platforms and Algorithmic Subjectivities, (Westminster University Press, 2022).

E-mail: emi_armano@yahoo.it

Ugo Ascoli has been Full Professor of Economic Sociology at the Polytechnic University of Marche, Department of Economic and Social Sciences. His research interests concentrate on comparative analysis of welfare systems, main characteristics of Italian Welfare State, relationships between public bodies and third sector organizations, volunteers and voluntary organizations. In the journal "Social Policies" he is responsible for the column "welfare italia". His work has been published in many Italian and International journals.

E-mail: ugo.ascoli@libero.it

* 10.3280/SO2025-002011

Studi organizzativi n. 2 2025, Issn 0391-8769, Issn-e 1972-4969

Sonia Bertolini is Professor of Sociology of Work at the University of Turin, Italy. Her research interests include youth labour market entry, female labour market participation, labour market flexibilisation and the transition to adult life, work-life balance, organizations and careers, the sociology of professions, and mixed-methods research. She is the Director of the University and Professions Observatory and of the Master's Programme in Human Resource Management. She has held coordination, management, and participation roles in national and international research projects. Among her recent publications: Bertolini, S., Goglio, V., & Hofäcker, D. (2023). Job Insecurity and Life Courses. Bristol University Press.

E-mail: sonia.bertolini@unito.it

Anna Carreri is Associate Professor of Sociology of Work and Organization at the University of Verona, Italy. At the same University she is coordinator and co-founder of the Research Centre RE-WOrk: REsearching for REmaking Work and Organizing. She is also affiliated with the School of Social Sciences, Hasselt University, Belgium. Her work has been published in journals including British Journal of Industrial Relations, Current Sociology, and Community, Work and Family. Her current research is focused on 'new' time-space patterns of (non-)work and diversity issues, and alternative forms of organizing social reproduction.

E-mail: anna.carreri@univr.it

Patrick Cingolani is a Sociologist and Professor at Université Paris Cité. His research explores labor transformations, precarity, and autonomy in contemporary capitalism, with a focus on digital labor and the impact of platform economies. He has extensively studied the intersection between technology and new forms of work. Among his works, La précarité (PUF, 2023) reinterprets precarious labor beyond traditional sociological frameworks, while La colonisation du quotidien. Dans les laboratoires du capitalisme de plateforme (Amsterdam Éditions, 2021) examines how platform capitalism reshapes everyday life.

E-mail: cingolanipatrick@gmail.com

Salvatore Cominu is Researcher at IRES Piemonte, socio-economic institute of Torino, Italy and at Consorzio AASTER of Milano, Italy. His work focuses on the relationship between technological, organizational and labor transformations, and more generally the problems of industry and regional development. On these topics, he has published in Sociologia del Lavoro and Studi Organizzativi.

E-mail: salvatore.cominu@gmail.com

Ylenia Curzi is an Associate Professor of Organization Studies at the Marco Biagi Department of Economics of the University of Modena and Reggio Emilia, Italy. Her research interests include the relationship between organization and digitalization. On these topics, she has published in Impresa Progetto – Electronic Journal of Management, Organization Studies, and Studi Organizzativi.

E-mail: ylenia.curzi@unimore.it

Juliette Davret is a postdoctoral researcher on the Data Stories project at Maynooth University Social Sciences Institute. She holds a PhD in geography from Nantes University and works across disciplines including social geography, critical data studies, digital geography, and science and technology studies. Her research explores power dynamics in data practices, using qualitative methods to uncover inequalities in areas like planning and governance.

E-mail: juliette.davret@mu.ie

François-Xavier de Vaujany is Professor of organization studies at Université Paris Dauphine-PSL and researcher at DRM (UMR CNRS 7088). His work deals with the fabric of novelty in capitalist societies, in particular its time and space dimensions.

E-mail: francois-xavier.devaujany@dauphine.psl.eu

Domenica Farinella is Associate Professor of Economic Sociology at the University of Messina. Her research focuses on the transformations of labor, change in rural economies, informalisation and precarization in various sectors, from agriculture to digital work, with a critical socio-economic approach. She has recently published (with Davide Arcidiacono), Beyond formality: the informalization and tertiarization of labour in the gig economy, in The Routledge Handbook of Gig Economy (2023), edited by Immanuel Ness.

E-mail: dfarinella@unime.it

Giovanna Fullin is Full Professor of Labour Sociology at the Department of Sociology and Social Research, University of Milan-Bicocca, Italy. She studies work and labour market from a sociological perspective. Her research interests focus on front line service jobs, structural changes in the labour market, employment in the service sector, migrants and labour market, gender differences in the labour market, remote work, work flexibility.

E-mail: Giovanna.fullin@unimib.it

Carla Maria Kayanan is an Assistant Professor at Maynooth University. Her research spans three overlapping areas: planning and policymaking, economic development, and technology and innovation. She has published a number of articles in Geography, Urban Studies, and Planning journals, as well as policy reports.

E-mail: carla.kayanan@mu.ie

Rob Kitchin is a Professor in the Maynooth University Social Sciences Institute and Department of Geography. His research examines the production of digital geographies. He is the (co)author or (co)editor of 37 academic books and (co)author of over 250 articles. He is an editor of the international journal, Dialogues on Digital Society.

E-mail: rob.kitchin@mu.ie

Dawn Lyon is Professor of Sociology at the University of Kent, UK. She is a sociologist of work, time and everyday life with a particular interest in rhythm. Her recent research explores the experience of the 'time' of the pandemic and has been published in History of the Human Sciences, Journal of Sociology, Sociology, and The Sociological Review.

E-mail: d.m.lyon@kent.ac.uk

Samuel Mutter is a postdoctoral researcher on the Data Stories project at Maynooth University Social Sciences Institute. He holds a PhD in politics from Birkbeck, University of London. With a background in political geographies of urban infrastructure, Samuel is interested in questions of data mobilities and data power. His work has been published in journals including Progress in Human Geography, City and Mobilities.

E-mail: samuel.mutter@mu.ie

Valentina Pacetti is Associate Professor at the Department of Sociology and Social Research, University of Milan-Bicocca, Italy. Her research interests focus on the relationship between organizations and territorial contexts, ranging from foreign direct investment attraction policies to industrial restructuring strategies and organizational networks. More recently, she has been investigating remote work and its implications both in organizational terms and for employment relations.

E-mail: valentina.pacetti@unimib.it

Marino Pezzolo is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the University of Naples “Federico II”, department of political science. His research interests focus on the active aging of workers especially in the Italian healthcare sector, and he previously explored occupational welfare and Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) in Italian SMEs during his PhD. His work has been published in academic journals, with a focus on topics such as corporate welfare, CSR, and labor transformations.

E-mail: marino.pezzolo@unina.it

Ilenia Picardi is an Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Naples Federico II (UNINA). Her research explores the sociology of scientific knowledge and the intersections between technology and society, with a focus on healthcare innovation, environmental sustainability, and gender equality in academia and science.

E-mail: ilenia.picardi@unina.it

Sara Recchi is a Research Fellow at the Department of Sociology and Social Research, University of Milan-Bicocca. Her research interests include poor work and labour market inequalities, migrant workers and the informal economy in both Global North and Global South, as well as the impact of digitalisation on working conditions. In recent years, she has focused on remote work and its implications for work organisation and employee well-being.

E-mail: sara.recchi@unimib.it

Anne-Iris Romens is a research fellow at the Department of Sociology and Social Research of the University of Milan-Bicocca. She holds a PhD in Social Sciences (University of Padua), a European master's degree in human Rights (E.Ma at the EIUC in Venice), and a Master's degree in Political Sciences (Sciences Po Strasbourg). She has four years of experience as a postdoctoral research fellow in Italian academia and over four years of experience working for institutions and NGOs in Italy, Colombia, France, and Brazil. Her research interests regard migration, care, remote work, and industrial relations, analysed from an intersectional and decolonial perspective.

E-mail: anneiris.romens@unimib.it

Corinne Siino is an Urban studies and Planning Professor at the University of Toulouse 2. Her research explores labor dynamics, urban transformations, and the socio-economic impact of digitalization. She has studied telework, Coworking spaces, and emerging work arrangements in contemporary capitalism, with a focus on inequalities and urban planning public policies. On this topic, she recently published “El teletrabajo como parte de una transición socioecológica urbana. El ejemplo del área metropolitana de Toulouse” (2024), Mundos Plurales.

E-mail: corinne.siino@univ-tlse2.fr

Lia Tirabeni is Associate Professor of Sociology of Organizations at the Department of Sociology and Social Research, University of Milan-Bicocca, Italy. Her research interests include the relationship between technologies, work and organizing. Her research in this field has been published in Work, Employment and Society, Qualitative Research in Organizations and Management, and Sociology Compass.

E-mail: lia.tirabeni@unimib.it

Melissa Tyler is a Professor of Work and Organization Studies, and Director of the Centre for Work, Organization and Society (CWOS) at the University of Essex, and chair of the Judith Butler research network. In 2024-5, she was a visiting scholar at the University of Verona. Melissa's research on gender, feminist theory and recognition has been published in a range of journal articles, contributions to edited collections, and authored books, most recently Organizing Vulnerability (Bristol University Press, 2025).

E-mail: mjtyler@essex.ac.uk